

Henry Clay Frick's business life

- Anarchy (n): society in which there is no government
 - Anarchist (n): someone who advocates for anarchy
- Assassinate (v): kill suddenly, esp. politically prominent person; murder premeditatedly
- Industrialist (n): someone who owns or manages an industrial company (dictionary.com)
- Industry (n): manufacturing, business activity
- Strike (n): stop of work as way to make employer give in to workers' demands, or in protest against conditions set by employer (dictionary.com)
- Union (n): organization of workers who share common goal of improving working conditions

Art/Decoration

- Art Nouveau (n): style of art/architecture in late 1800s/early 1900s with curvy lines and natural forms
- Eclectic (adj): coming from many different sources
- Exquisite (adj): extraordinarily fine or admirable
- Landscape (n): picture showing nature or rural scenery
- Motif (n): recurring subject, theme, idea in artistic work
- Portrait (n): painting, drawing, or photograph of a person
- Romanesque (adj): style of art/architecture of Rome in 9th-12th century, characterized by round arches, narrow openings
- Renaissance (adj): relating to European Renaissance 14th-17th centuries (revival of art, literature, learning)
- Ornate (adj): elaborately decorated, often excessively (dictionary.com)

Things in the House

- Bidet (n): low basin for washing genital and perineal area

- Annunciator (n): system for calling household workers o particular rooms in the house
- Orchestrion (n): mechanical musical instrument, somewhat like an organ, made to sound like an orchestra

Other

- Affluent (adj): having an excessive of wealth, property, material objects, etc
- Gilded Age (n): period in America at end of 1800s, expanding economy and growth of industry, wealthy class very influential in government
- Mansion (n): large, impressive residence

- Poker (n): card game played by 2+ players, players bet on value of cards in their hand
- Chambermaid (n): girl who cleans and tidies bathrooms and bedrooms
- Governess (n): woman who takes charge of child's upbringing, education, etc (dictionary.com)
- Chauffeur (n): person who drives car or limousine for owner